Field of the Invention This invention relates to an apparatus and method for removing interior trim panels which have been applied to new automobiles and is designed to remove a portion of the front and rear trim panels in a single action. 2. Description of Prior Art A process for producing an automobile from a body, or unibody, having a pre-fitted trim panel assembly is well known in the art. In the pre-fitted trim panel assembly, a front trim panel is fitted at the front portion of the body prior to painting and primer spraying of the body. A seal, which supports an inner structure of the pre-fitted trim panel, is also applied to the pre-fitted trim panel. Thus, the finished appearance of the pre-fitted trim panel is guaranteed by the seal being attached to the body. In the automotive industry, automobiles are produced with a variety of wheelbases which may vary between brands or model years. Thus, as the wheelbases of the automobiles are changed, it is necessary to remove any trim panels which are mounted to the bodies of such automobiles. As a result, those trim panels are removed, re-fitted into different wheelbase automobiles, and then reinstalled onto the automobiles. Trim panel remover apparatuses are known in the prior art. In general, trim panel remover apparatuses are intended to remove trim panels in a single action. One example of an existing trim panel remover apparatus comprises a first member having a pair of spaced hook members, a second member having a pair of spaced hook members engaged with the pair of spaced hook members of the first member, and a third member having a pair of spaced hook members engaged with the pair of spaced hook members of the second member. The hook members of the third member have a larger diameter than the hook members of the first and second members, thereby providing a force component to assist in separating a trim panel from the seal. The prior art trim panel remover apparatus suffers from a disadvantage in that the trim panel remover apparatus is time consuming to use in that it requires a two-step process, wherein the first member and the second member are f678ea9f9e
